The Complete Home Learning Sourcebook The Essential Resource Guide for Homeschoolers, Parents, and Educators Covering Every Subject from Arithmetic to Zoology Three Rivers Press (CA) Lists all the resources needed to create a balanced curriculum for homeschooling--from preschool to high school level Serving Homeschooled Teens and Their Parents Libraries Unlimited Today more than a million students are being educated at home. Because of this growing trend, public librarians are increasingly being called upon to serve the needs of homeschooled students. This book provides guidance in this area, first reviewing the developmental and social needs of teens, then demonstrating how those can be met in the public library setting. It includes a wealth of ideas for adapting every facet of your library service to meet the needs of this growing population, from developing a homeschool collection and expanding services and special programs to promoting these offerings. Extensive resource lists conclude the volume. Public Schools, Public Menace How Public Schools Lie to Parents and Betray Our Children Shawn K. Hall "Public Schools, Public Menace" shows parents how public schools can seriously harm their children. He also tells parents about new, low-cost, quality education alternatives to give their kids a great education. Home Schooling Status and Bibliography Nova Publishers From left to right on the political spectrum, there is at least one note of agreement: the nation's school system has not delivered universal quality education. Accordingly, debate has raged over how to rectify this situation. Should the government increase funding, encourage privatisation, some of both? Another option, though, has emerged and is seemingly gaining popularity -- home schooling. Citing both substandard education and displeasure with school environments and curricula, many parents have decided to teach their own children. Supporters say it is well within their rights to raise their children as they see fit and that at-home learning is superior to the public system. Detractors claim that home-schooled children are deprived of social interaction and the broad-based education provided by the system. Neither side wants to cede ground, making the issue of home schooling an integral part of a wider national debate on education. In this book, the specific topic of home schooling is presented from all relevant sides to give a complete picture of the present status of the issue and its potential for future resolution. Following this overview is a thorough and carefully selected bibliography of literature about home schooling from all viewpoints. Easy access to his important resource is then provided via author, title, and subject indexes. Educating Deaf Students From Research to Practice Oxford University Press Over the past decade there has been a significant increase in interest from educators and the general public about deafness, special education, and the development of children with special needs. The education of deaf children in the United States has been seen as a remarkable success story around the world, even while it continues to engender domestic debate. In Educating Deaf Students: From Research to Practice, Marc Marschark, Harry G. Lang, and John A. Albertini set aside the politics, rhetoric, and confusion that often accompany discussions of deaf education. Instead they offer an accessible evaluation of the research literature on the needs and strengths of deaf children and on the methods that have been used--successfully and unsuccessfully--to teach both deaf and hearing children. The authors lay out the common assumptions that have driven deaf education for many years, revealing some of them to be based on questionable methods, conclusions, or interpretations, while others have been lost in the cacophony of alternative educational philosophies. They accompany their historical consideration of how this came to pass with an evaluation of the legal and social conditions surrounding deaf education today. By evaluating what we know, what we do not know, and what we thought we knew about learning among deaf children, the authors provide parents, teachers, and administrators valuable new insights into educating deaf students and others with special needs. Features *Presents a summary of the current state of deaf education and related implications for parents, teachers, and other "gatekeepers" *Authors are leading authorities in deaf research and education *Explains complex information in a way that will be useful to teachers, parents, and future professionals, as well as to researchers Teach Your Own The Indispensable Guide to Living and Learning with Children at Home Hachette UK The classic guide to teaching children at home for a new generation of homeschooling parents In 2019, there were more than two million children being homeschooled. That number doubled during the pandemic and is now likely to continue increasing as more parents worry that school might not be the best place for their children to learn and grow. Teach Your Own helped launch the homeschooling movement; now, its timeless and revolutionary message of recognizing the ways children come to understand the world has been updated for today's environment. Parents and caregivers will discover how to navigate: Learning in a classroom versus learning in the world The difference between a learning difficulty (which we all experience every time we try to learn anything) and a learning disability. Schedules that achieve the homeschooling-work-life balance that you want as a family The relationship between learning and play Homeschooling and technology And much more. John Holt's warm understanding of children and his passionate belief in every child's ability to learn have made this book an essential resource for over forty years to homeschooling families. The Homeschooling Option How to Decide When It's Right for Your Family Springer Correcting misconceptions through profiles of diverse families, Rivero uncovers the changing and complex needs of children today. This book addresses the major questions parents are bound to have as they consider the homeschooling option: socialization, curriculum, special needs arrangements, resources, and more.

Helping Parents Take an Honest Look at Various Considerations Before Leaving a Traditional School to Begin Schooling from Home. a Resource Guide for Parents Searching for the Right-Fit Educational Choice for Their Child with Executive Function Deficits, Frustration, ADHD, And/or Learning Disabilities Should I Homeschool? Does your child have difficulties in his or her school? Does academic performance or adherence to social norms leave something to be desired? Is your child notably bored, disinterested or emotionally volatile? If so, it may be time to take charge of your child's learning and consider schooling at home. Should I Homeschool is a practical resource for parents searching for the right-fit educational choice for their child with Executive Function deficits, frustration, ADHD and/or learning differences. This guide is equally relevant for parents with a neurotypical child. The book investigates the pros and cons of alternative educational options without bias toward either. It puts into context real-life experiences with homeschooling, special schools and the traditional school setting. Can a child with dysgraphia excel to Honors English if given adequate support? Can students with dyscalculia progress to Advanced Math classes? Could supplemental tutoring benefit the child while remaining in a mainstream school? When is schooling at home not advisable? What other, often less obvious factors, must filter into this important decision? This book is a decision guide to help you making the best choice for your family in your circumstances. Questions addressed How should the Corona virus, the flu or other bugs influence my decision? What special considerations do I have to give to ADHD and Executive Function Weaknesses? Am I satisfied with the curriculum at school? Am I qualified to teach school at home? What's Interest-Based Learning, and how can it help my child? How can I Improve my child's attitude, aptitude and academic performance? How do I analyze my circumstances pragmatically and make the best choice for my family and child? Such a decision must never be made uniformly, because every child responds differently to situations even if the conditions at home and in school appear identical. Based on her teaching experience and extensive discussions of these issues with many parents and children, Connie investigates every argument without prejudice. She guides the reader through a decision-making process that culminates with a personalized decision matrix for the best possible choice based on the reader's situation. The Ultimate Book of Homeschooling Ideas 500+ Fun and Creative Learning Activities for Kids Ages 3-12 Crown Fun and Effective Home Learning Activities for Every Subject As a homeschooling parent, you're always looking for new and creative ways to teach your child the basics. She also realizes that there are several options available for parents who are looking to homeschool, and she addresses the many different options from an unbiased view point. She does share her own personal story, but does not try to sway your decision. Making the decision to homeschool can be an exciting, yet somewhat frightening event. There are many questions to consider, and it is a decision that should not be made lightly. How to Homeschool Your Children helps take away the fear of homeschooling. Reading this guide will help you feel more prepared and confident to make the best decision for your family. This guide helps homeschooling become a rewarding and enriching experience for everyone. About the Expert Jane Rodda holds a Bachelor's Degree in Liberal Studies with a concentration in Psychology from Point Loma Nazarene University in San Diego, California. She currently lives in Nashville, Tennessee, but has previously lived and worked in several places in the United States. Jane has over twenty years experience working in Christian Day Camps. Her first job was as an assistant craft counselor, and through the years she worked her way up to eventually directing the camps, and then eventually pioneering a brand new day camp program which served a community desperately in need of programs for children. She wrote How To Start a Christian Day Camp because she passionately believes that Day Camps provide an excellent opportunity for churches to be able to reach several members of the community. Jane has seen camps meet the needs of parents, by providing something for their children; kids, by providing fun and exciting programs, and youth, by providing an opportunity to serve. Jane has learned a lot through all of her experiences, and she seeks to help others learn as well. Her hope is that churches or individuals will be encouraged and inspired to start Christian Day Camps and see the fun and exciting changes they can bring to a community.
